The Emory Writing Center is Open to Medical Imaging Program Students

The Emory Writing Center began serving MIP students in January of 2020. We encourage you to take advantage of this excellent, free resource.

Overview of Writing Center Consulting Services

What do Writing Center Tutors and Fellows Do?
The Writing Center’s highly interdisciplinary staff of undergraduate tutors and graduate fellows are available to support MIP students with a range of projects, including course papers, presentations, grants, and job application materials. Through one-on-one consultations, tutors can work with students at any stage of the writing process on any issues of concern, including idea development, structure, use of sources, grammar, and word choice. Writing Center tutors do not proofread. Instead, their consultations equip you with strategies and resources you can continue to use as you write, revise, and edit on your own.

Why Should I Visit the Writing Center?
The Writing Center has been serving Emory College, Laney Graduate School, and School of Nursing Students for many years. In the anonymous exit surveys students complete after each appointment, these students consistently rate their Writing Center consultations as “excellent,” credit the center with making them better writers, and indicate that they would recommend the center to their friends. Whether you consider yourself a strong writer or you’re struggling, everyone can benefit from discussing their work with a peer. Why not take advantage of this incredible resource?

Where is the Writing Center, and When is it Open?
The Writing Center is located in Callaway (north wing) room N-111, but is closed for in-person consultations this fall due to the pandemic. The full staff of thirty-three undergraduate tutors and four graduate fellows is available for online consultations, though, with appointments available throughout the day and evening Sundays through Fridays beginning August 31st.
